OBITUARY

Denis Lambert Sugrue

Denis Sugrue was born in Dublin on 10 March 1927. He was educated at the Catholic University School and Blackrock College. He commenced his medical studies in University College Dublin (UCD) in 1944. The following year he was awarded a Kitchener Scholarship. He achieved the MB, BAO and BCH degrees in 1950. He then came to England to pursue postgraduate training in ENT. He obtained the DLO RCS England in 1953 and the MCh, National University of Ireland in 1954.

At the University, Denis joined the Boat Club and he was most fortunate in being a participant in a successful era of UCD rowing, which culminated in 1948 with his selection to cox the Irish Olympic Eight in the London Olympic Games. In 2012, he was awarded the Medal of Honour by the Olympic Council of Ireland.

Abandoning ENT in favour of plastic surgery, Denis accepted the post of registrar in ENT. He was advised to consider a change of speciality, and he was appointed to a post at St Thomas Hospital in what was then classified as venereology. Subsequently, Denis was appointed as consultant venereologist to the North and Mid-Staffordshire Hospitals in 1972. Denis was active in promoting the new vision of venereology and was a founder member as well as the first president of the Midlands Society of Genitourinary Medicine.

Denis remained in his post in North Staffordshire Hospital until his retirement in 1989. He was dedicated to the care of his patients as well as to teaching his junior colleagues. He gave unflinching support, advice and friendship to his consultant colleagues.

Denis died peacefully on 23 July 2014. His wife, two daughters and grandchildren survive him.

Taha Wanas
Retired consultant in GU medicine, The Royal Wolverhampton Hospitals NHS Trust

Competing interests None.

Provenance and peer review Commissioned; internally peer reviewed.

To cite Wanas T. Sex Transm Infect 2015;91:10.
Sex Transm Infect 2015;91:10.
doi:10.1136/sextrans-2014-051946